Two Famous Misers.

(The Outlook.)

Of William and John Scott, afterward Lord Stowell and Lord Eldon, Lord John Russell used to tell with infinite zest a story which he declared to be highly characteristic of the methods of which they made their fortunes and position. When they were young men at the bar, having had a stroke of professional luck, they determined to celebrate the occasion by having a dinner at the tavern and going to the play. When it was time to call for the reckoning, William Scott dropped a guinea. He and his byother searched for it in vain, and came to the conclusion that it had fallen between the boards of the uncarpeted floor.

that it had fallen between the boards of the uncarpeted floor.

"This is a bad job," said William, "we must give up the play."

"Stop a bit." said John, "I know a trick worth two of that," and called the waitress.

"Betty." said he, "we've dropped two guineas. See if you can find them." Betty found the one guinea, which had rolled under the fender.

"That's a very good girl, Betty," said John Scott, pocketing the coin, "and when you find the other you can keep it for your trouble." And the prudent brothers went with light hearts to the play, and so eventually to the bench and the woolsack.

The great parade yesterday was a big success. The sidewalks were literally packed with a seething mass of humanwas a particularly trying one. For twelve miles they marched, from camp, through the winding line of streets, and back again to their rural retreat within the woods. The sun was unmercifully hot, and not the slightest breeze relieved the heat. But the troops forgot the heat, their tired limbs became rejuvenated, and their drooping spirits rose as the national colors were borne above them and our well-drilled bands made mellow music with happy southern airs. General Lee and staff, forming a circle around the corp: flag, presented a happy picture. the corp: flag, presented a happy picture, and as the boys passed in review their lines were as straight as a die. A Revision of the Famous Case

IT CAUSES CAVAIGNAC TO RESIGNA

Seems Very Probable,

The War Minister Seems the Only Cabinet Officer Opposing.

HE BELIEVES DREYFUS GUILTY.

The Most Powerful Influence Could Not Shake His Determination to Resign His Portfolio-The Populace Greatly Stirred Up

PARIS, September 3 .- M. Cavalgnao, Minister for War, has resigned, owing to a disagreement with his colleagues, who desire a revision of the Dreyfus case; thus a revision of the case scems issured. M. Cavaignae sent the following letter of resignation to M. Brisson, Premier and president of the Council:

"I have the honor to send you," and to peg you to transmit to the President of the republic, my resignation as Minister for War. There exists a disagreement between us which, being prolonged, would paralyze the government at a time when it most needs full unity of de-CONVINCED OF DREYFUS'S GUILT.

"I remain convinced of the guilt of Dreyfus, and as determined as heretofere to combat a revision of the case. I do not intend to shirk the responsibilities of the present situation, but I care not assume them without being in accord with the chief of the government to which I have the honor to belong, The Dreyfus agitation is not abating,

The populace was again inflamed to-day by posters printed by the Slecle, with which the town has been plastered. They reproduce two letters which Dreyfus wrote to the Minister for War in 1891. and one which he wrote to his counsel. M. DeMange, in the same year, proesting his innocence, and denying that he had ever been guilty of indiscretion. The posters also call attention to the fact that Colonel Picquart wrote, on July 9th, affirming the falsity of Lieutenant-Coionel Henry's documents, and they denounce the arrest and imprisonment of Colonel

WHY CAVAIGNAC RESIGNED.

These are the circumstances which led M. Cavalgnae to resign: After th covery of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry's forgery the government sought means to eassure the public. The question of revision was broached. Certain ministers believed the time had come to throw full light on every detail of the trial and con-viction of Dreyfus, and to establish every responsibility. M. Cavaignac strongly ob-jected. He declared that he was convinced of the guilt of Dreylus, M. Bris-son vainly endeavored to overcome his resistance, and later M. Serrien pointed out to M. Cavaignae that the revision would be purely judicial. M. Cavaignad replied that revision could only be justified if some new fact were developed to show there had been a judicial error, and that no such fact existed, Henry's forgery being subsequent to the conviction of Dreyfus, and only indirectly connected with it.

M. Bourgeols, who was recalled from Switzerland, made a new effort, but M. Cavaignac still refused. The latter then saw M. Brisson, the Premier, and de-clared that his determination was immovable, and that he would resign.
After M. Cavaignac's departure a ference was held at the ministry of the Interior between M. Brisson, Bourgeois, and Sarrien. About 9 o'clock M. Cavaige ac's letter of resignation was received, MAJORITY ARE WITH BRISSON. It is assumed that a majority of the is the other ministers retain their portenables the government to decide the mat-ter, and it is believed that M. Cavaignac's successor at the War Office will soon be

As to my connection with the desecration of the grave of the Confederate soldier "Duke," a court-martial, com-posed of a brigadier-general, four colo-nels, four majors, and four other offiers, has already adjudged. Two of these Over sixty witnesses testified, and 500 pages of evidence were recorded, and what was the decision? That I took no part in these desecrations; that I was guilty of neglect of duty only because I did not arrest privates who were digging in the grave. My part in the deplorable affair, as testified to in the court-martial by myself and borne out by other evidence, was as follows: On the morning of August 6th, while the Second Division was camped near Bull Run, I was out sketching, as is my custom when I have leisure. strolling about the battle-field I came upon a body of men digging in a little hole, about inches deep and 2 feet across, I had aleady seen dozens of men all over the field searching for relies and not a few digging, so I thought nothing er who was present. Then I learned a gravestone was thereabouts, and und it lying out some fifteen feet from where the men were digging.

I learned what was on it, but as I had been informed that all the bodies of soldiers thereabouts had been removed to Arlington and Manassas, did not think much of the matter. However, I saw hospital corps man there, and ordered him back to camp (he was the only man there over whom I supposed I had au-The other men there were no As I am a surgeon, I have no

After ordering the men away I left the spot at once, and have never seen it since. That is the sum and substance of my And there is no evidence to prove that I was there again.

Now as to the desecrations. It was shown on trial that some parties began digging again, but were immediately stopped by a captain of the Third New York about 10:30 A. M. At that time the excavation had reached a depth of two evidence further shows that I rearned to camp before H A. M., and was here the remainder of the day, that some time in the afternoon, probably between 2 and 3, other parties again opened the grave, and this time took out the skull ne or two bones, but that nothing was taken away.

This captain stopped the dig-nes, refilled the grave, and placed a ord over it. This ended the deplorable affair. I have one thing more to say. It has been charged that I was the leader of this, and that I did it out of feeling toward the Confederate dead. I want to deny that accusation. I do not be lieve that it was made by ex-Confede oldiers, living or dead, I have a pro-ound respect. I, too, am a soldier, and have read with admiration of the dashing troopers of J. E. B. The memory of their heroism is a heritage to all. Neither do I think that the men who actually took part in the sad affair did it out of sectional feeling. I think rather
